Impeachment Recommendation Could Come Next Week

The Illinois House Committee investigating whether to recommend impeaching Governor Rod Blagojevich could make a decision next week.

State Representative Roger Eddy of Crawford County says they're considering Blagojevich's criminal case without interfering with witnesses or evidence.

The Governor faces charges of trying to sell Barack Obama's U.S. Senate seat.

Eddy says the committee might interview witnesses who have accused Blagojevich of firing them in recent years for political reasons.

"If the committee and committee chair believes we need to hear more, it's going to take a lit bit longer. If those of us who believe we need to move on now, and that we have enough and can go ahead and draft articles of impeachment for this governor and begin the process which will end with the whole house, the entire House of Representatives meeting, that could be buttoned up within a week and then the Senate would take care of the removal, the trial for removal," says Rep. Eddy (R- Hutsonville).

The Illinois House Committee will reconvene on Monday.
